

Contributors

Pamela Abbott is a lecturer in information systems at Brunel University, London. She has research interests in distributed collaborative work in outsourced IT projects, ICTs and development, and technological diffusion and its impact on organizations, work practices, and contemporary business models.

Payal Arora is an assistant professor in the Department of Media and Communication at Erasmus University, Rotterdam, and GE Fellow on the Industrial Internet Project. She is the author of several books including Dot Com Mantra (Ashgate, 2010), The Leisure Commons (Routledge, 2014), and co-author, Crossroads of New Media, Identity and Law (Palgrave, in press).

Brian Ekdale is an assistant professor in the School of Journalism and Mass Communication at the University of Iowa.

Radhika Gajjala is a professor of media and communication at Bowling Green State University in Ohio. She is author of Cyberculture and the Subaltern (Lexington Press, 2012) and Cyberselves: Feminist Ethnographies of South Asian Women (Altamira, 2004).

Beth E. Kolko is a professor in Human Centered Design and Engineering at the University of Washington. She is also a faculty associate at the Berkman Center for Internet and Society, Harvard University.

Elisa Oreglia is a research fellow at the Wee Kim Wee School of Communication and Information at Nanyang Technological University in China.

Peppino Ortoleva is a professor of Media History and Theory at the University of Torino, Italy.

Robert Racadio is a PhD candidate in Human Centered Design and Engineering at the University of Washington.

Nimmi Rangaswamy is a senior research scientist with Xerox Research Centre India. She is also adjunct professor at the Indian Institute of Technology, Hyderabad.

Araba Sey is a research assistant professor at the University of Washington Information School.

Dinah Tetteh is a doctoral student in the School of Media and Communication, Bowling Green State University in Ohio. Her research interests include ICT4H, ICT4D, women's health, and social support. She has presented at international and national academic conferences and has coauthored book chapters and journal articles.

Melissa Tully is an assistant professor in the School of Journalism and Mass Communication at the University of Iowa.

