Contributors

Abdallah Daar is Professor of Public Health Sciences and Surgery at the University of Toronto, a Director at the McLaughlin-Rotman Centre for Global Health, Chief Science and Ethics Officer of Grand Challenges Canada, and Chair of the Board of the Global Alliance for Chronic Diseases.

Ineke Buskens is an international gender, research, and facilitation consultant living in the Western Cape, South Africa. She started her career as a cultural anthropologist, lecturing Women's Studies at Leiden University in the Netherlands. She is project leader of the GRACE Network in Africa and the Middle East.

Laurent Elder leads the Canadian International Development Research Centre's Pan Asia Networking (PAN) program, which studies the positive and negative impacts of the information society on Asian countries in order to help communities make the best use of information and communication technologies.

Heloise Emdon is the Program Manager for the Acacia Program of the International Development Research Centre, Canada. (This program will be closing in March 2011.) She is also Program Leader of the Innovation Technology and Society Program. She holds an MA in Development Studies from the University of Witwatersrand, Johannesburg, South Africa.

Mark Graham is a Research Fellow at the Oxford Internet Institute, University of Oxford. His work focuses on the intersections among ICTs, geography, and economic development.

Blane Harvey is a Fellow in Climate Change and Development at the Institute of Development Studies, University of Sussex, UK. Prior to joining IDS, he completed a PhD in Education and International Development at McGill University (Canada) and worked with the United Nations Institute for Training and Research.

Håvard Haarstad is a post-doctoral Research Fellow at the Department of Geography, University of Bergen. His work is broadly related to the political economy of global change, with a particular focus on the shifting spaces for civil society politics.

Myra Khan is an undergraduate student at the University of Waterloo, with an interest in world issues and international development.

Melissa Loudon is a doctoral student at the USC Annenberg School for Communication & Journalism. She previously worked at Cell-Life and the University of Cape Town.

Hassan Masum is Innovation Lead at the McLaughlin-Rotman Centre for Global Health. He edited The Reputation Society, has worked in engineering, collaborative technologies, foresight, and global health. He is passionate about working with governments, research labs, companies, nonprofits, and changemakers to tackle complex sociotechnical challenges.

Ben A. Petrazzini is Program Leader of the ICT4D Programs in the Americas at the International Development Research Centre (IDRC) of Canada. Prior to this, he was Senior Policy Advisor with the Office of the Secretary General of the International Telecommunication Union (ITU) and representative of the ITU to the United Nations in New York. He holds a PhD in Communication from University of California, San Diego, an MA in Social Sciences, and a law degree.

Katherine Reilly is Assistant Professor of Global Communication and Social Justice in the School of Communication at Simon Fraser University in Vancouver, Canada.

Karl Schroeder is a specialist in the area of strategic and technology foresight, chiefly in scenario design. He is also an internationally successful author of speculative fiction, including Ventus, Permanence, and the Virga series.

Matthew L. Smith is a Program Officer in the ICT4D program area at the International Development Research Centre (IDRC) in Ottawa, Canada. He has a PhD in Information Systems from the London School of Economics and Political Science.

Revi Sterling is the Faculty Director of the ICTD graduate program at the ATLAS Institute, University of Colorado–Boulder. Before that, she spent a decade at Microsoft. She holds a PhD in Technology, Media and Society from the ATLAS Institute.

Ulrike Rivett is an Associate Professor and the Head of Information for Community Oriented Municipal Services (iCOMMS) in the Department of Civil Engineering at the University of Cape Town. She is one of the founders of Cell-Life.