Contributors

Savita Bailur is a research associate in the Information Systems and Innovation Group, London School of Economics, having completed her PhD from the same group. She is also currently a senior researcher on a World Bank Institute research project on ICTs for transparency and accountability.

Hsain Ilahiane is an associate professor of anthropology at the University of Kentucky.

Renee Kuriyan is the Director of Social Impact for Intel Corporation's Corporate Responsibility Office.

Scott Mainwaring is a senior research scientist in Intel Labs' Interaction and Experience Lab.

Silvia Masiero is a PhD candidate at the Information Systems and Innovation Group, London School of Economics and Political Science. She is also a member of the Conflict Research Group at LSE and a research assistant at MEDALICS, Research Centre for Mediterranean Relationships, Italy.

Dawn Nafus is a senior research scientist at Intel Labs. She has research interests in temporality, discourses of modernity, and the anthropology of measurement.

Isha Ray is an associate professor with the Energy and Resources Group, UC Berkeley. She serves as an adviser to several nonprofit groups that work on water, technology, and sustainable development. She is a member of the Global Business Network.

Anke Schwittay is a lecturer at the Centre for Development Studies at the University of Auckland, New Zealand. She holds a PhD in anthropology from the University of California, Berkeley.

John W. Sherry has held a number of research and product development positions over the past 15 years at Intel Corporation. He holds a PhD in anthropology from the University of Arizona.

Cara Wallis is an assistant professor in the Department of Communication at Texas A&M University. She studies the use of new media technologies in China.