Contributors

Andrew Bayor is Literacy Bridge's country director for Ghana. He received his BS in computer science from the University for Development Studies (UDS), Ghana.

Joshua E. Blumenstock is an assistant professor at the University of Washington Information School. His research examines the economic and social impacts of ICTs in developing countries.

Sunandan Chakraborty is a PhD candidate in the Courant Institute of Mathematical Sciences at New York University. He is also associated with the Center for Technology and Economic Development (CTED), NYU Abu Dhabi as a graduate researcher.

Pushkar Chitnis is a senior research developer at Microsoft Research India. He is primarily involved in systems and interface research. He is also an active contributor to several Microsoft products, such as Windows and Visual studio.

Edward Cutrell manages the Technology for Emerging Markets (TEM) group at Microsoft Research India. He is also an affiliate associate professor at the Information School at the University of Washington.

Nathan Eagle is the CEO of Jana, a company that provides consumers in emerging markets with free mobile phone airtime in exchange for completing surveys. He also serves as an adjunct assistant professor at Harvard University.

Maria Garrido is a research assistant professor at the Information School, as well as a researcher with the Technology & Social Change Group at the University of Washington.

Michael Shayne Gary is a senior lecturer at the Australian School of Business. His research applies quantitative modeling to understand the dynamics of social systems. He teaches strategic management across MBA and executive programs. He received his PhD at London Business School.

Andrew C. Gordon is a professor emeritus at the Daniel J. Evans School of Public Affairs at the University of Washington.

Trina Jean Gorman worked on this evaluation as Literacy Bridge's program director. She has an MPA from the University of Washington and is currently leading a study for Innovations for Poverty Action in Uganda.

Michael Koenig is a development director in the Startup Business Group, Microsoft Corporation.

Julian May is a professor at the University of the Western Cape and the director of the Institute for Social Development. Between 2007 and 2011, he was the research director of Poverty and ICT in Urban & Rural East Africa (PICTURE-Africa), a project funded by the International Development Research Centre.

Indrani Medhi is an associate researcher in the Technology for Emerging Markets (TEM) group at Microsoft Research India. She is also a PhD candidate at the Industrial Design Centre, Indian Institute of Technology (IIT Bombay).

S. Raghu Menon is currently pursuing an MPhil in technology policy at the University of Cambridge, UK, as a Cambridge Commonwealth Scholar. He is an alumnus of Indian Institute of Science, Bangalore, and was a research assistant with Microsoft Research India during this project.

Keng Siang Ooi previously worked on the Microsoft Research India team during an internship, and now he is pursuing an MS in computer sciences at Universiti Sains Malaysia. He is also part of the Microsoft Student Partners program in Malaysia.

Matthew Phiong is a Bachelor of Computer Science (Honors) graduate of Universiti Sains Malaysia, having majored in distributed systems and security.

Aishwarya Lakshmi Ratan is the director of the Microsavings and Payments Innovation Initiative at Yale University. She manages a five-member team at the international research nonprofit organization Innovations for Poverty Action.

Cliff Schmidt is Literacy Bridge's founder and executive director. He received his BS in cognitive science from MIT, and his MS in computer science and engineering from the University of Washington.

Janaki Srinivasan graduated with a PhD from the School of Information, University of California, Berkeley, in December 2011. She was with the International Institute for Information Technology Bangalore for the early phases of fieldwork for this study.

Joe Sullivan is researcher with the Technology & Social Change Group at the University of Washington.

Kentaro Toyama is a visiting researcher at the School of Information, University of California, Berkeley. He is writing a book which argues that increasing individual and institutional wisdom should be the primary focus of global development.